Aims and Scope

The American Journal of Nephrology mainly focuses on timely topics in basic science. Papers are divided into several sections, including:

- Original reports, representing full sets of completed experiments that answer a given question
- In-depth reviews on a given topic which may be invited or submitted by a group or individual for review
- 'Kidney and beyond' publishes selected review articles on recently discovered molecules or molecular pathways that have the potential to regulate structural and functional aspects of inflammatory, systemic, metabolic or neoplastic renal diseases.

Responding to the ever increasing pace in research, the American Journal of Nephrology adheres to a very tight publication schedule: papers are published online first, and their printed version is included in the next issue.
